Amy e Bob Withers vivono in una baracca fatiscente nella piccola città neozelandese di Weimaru e, nella grave depressione economica degli anni Trenta, riescono a malapena a sfamare i loro quattro bambini. Francie, la maggiore, a dodici anni è costretta a lasciare la scuola con la prospettiva di un misero impiego nel locale lanificio. Teresa, detta Chicks, Pulcino, è la più piccola e trotterella sporca dietro i fratelli, in perenne ricerca di una caramella o di un gesto d'affetto. Toby, l'unico maschio, soffre di epilessia e attende spaventato quei momenti in cui Dio gli butta sulla testa «un mantello scuro», e lui lotta per liberarsi «agitando in aria le braccia e le gambe». Daphne, infine, la fragile e introversa Daphne, fa suo ogni pensiero, ogni palpito del cuore, ogni gioia e dolore dei suoi fratelli. Il luogo preferito dai piccoli Withers è la discarica dei rifiuti, il posto dove si cercano i tesori, dove Toby e Daphne trovano libri di fiabe mangiucchiati dai vermi e dove Francie può liberamente raccontare i suoi sogni di adolescente che si farà strada nel mondo, andrà a ballare con i ragazzi e i loro cuori batteranno insieme. Ma il futuro per chi nasce segnato non prevede alcuna realizzazione dei sogni. Passano gli anni e i fratelli Withers non trovano tesori sulle loro strade: Francie presto paga con una tragica fine il suo desiderio di evasione e trasgressione; Toby diventa un emarginato che si attacca ossessivamente a quel po' di denaro che riesce a guadagnare e a un rapporto morboso con la madre; Chicks si allontana dalla famiglia per sposarsi e cercare disperatamente un'esistenza agiata, che si rivela però fragilissima. E Daphne, la debole e indifesa Daphne, vive rinchiusa in un ospedale psichiatrico dove è sottoposta a ripetuti e dolorosi elettroshock. Dalla sua «camera morta» accompagna con il suo canto, il suo grido, la sua poesia, le vite dei genitori e dei fratelli. Opera prima di Janet Frame, che ne rivelò l'immenso talento lirico e narrativo, Gridano i gufi è un romanzo corale che parla di amore, abnegazione, dolore e speranza, gioie e lutti con una scrittura ricca di pathos e commozione tra le più alte della narrativa femminile di tutti i tempi. «Una storia che fa letteralmente mancare il fiato, raccontata senza un briciolo di reticenza ma con grande sapienza letteraria ed elevato spirito poetico». Corriere della Sera «È tra la parola e il silenzio, inteso come esperienza suprema del possibile, che si gioca l'esperienza narrativa di Janet Frame».

Winner of the Eisner Award for Talent Deserving Wider Recognition, the International Comics Festival Award for Best Debut Graphic Novel (Angouleme, France), and voted by Wizard Magazine as the best indie graphic novel of all time. "A convincing, absorbing and satisfying fictional portrait of post-college life in New York City."-- Publishers Weekly "A salute to comics, an exploration of the human condition, and a solid, absorbing, and riotously snide tale about at least half of the things that make life important."-- Tasha Robinson, The AV Club "Box Office Poison is a novel complex enough to provoke Book Talk. I even marked panels with post-it notes as I was reading so that I'd remember to show them to my friends."-- Kelly Sue DeConnick, Artbomb.com "The comic book equivalent of the world's best pineapple upside-down cake: layer upon layer of rich dramatic goodness."-- Matthew Craig, Robotfist.com "Box Office Poison is to the comic book culture as Almost Famous is to that of rock and roll."-- Chris Tamarri, The Daily Targum This 608-page epic story of Sherman, Dorothy, Ed, Stephen, Jane, and Mr. Flavor is a true comics masterpiece. Alex Robinson's completely natural and inspiring knack for dialogue makes this story of dreary jobs, comic books, love, sex, messy apartments, girlfriends (and the lack thereof), undisclosed pasts, and crusty old professionals one of the most delightful and whimsical graphic novels to hit the stands in years.

Futurist Women broadens current debates on Futurism and literary studies by demonstrating the expanding global impact of women Futurist artists and writers in the period succeeding the First World War. This study initially focuses on the local: the making of the self in the work by the women who were affiliated with the journal L'Italia futurista during World War I in Florence. But then it broadens its field of inquiry to the global. It compares the achievements of these women with those of key precursors and followers. It also conceives these women's work as an ongoing dialogue with contemporary political and scientific trends in Europe and North America, especially first wave feminism, eugenics, naturism and esotericism. Finally, it examines the vital importance and repercussions of these women's ideas in current debates on gender and the posthuman condition. This ground-breaking study will prove invaluable for all scholars and upper-level students of modern European literature, Futurism, and gender studies.

The chapters in this volume provide the first comprehensive overview of trends in research on early phonological, lexical, syntactic and pragmatic development in children acquiring two (or more) languages simultaneously. Ongoing as well as emerging issues are examined and discussed by leading researchers in the field. Collectively, these studies extend our knowledge of bilingual acquisition and broaden our understanding of the child's ability to acquire and use language. This volume is of interest to researchers working on language acquisition by monolingual and bilingual children, graduate students of psychology, linguistics and communication sciences, and researchers and professionals concerned with the diagnosis and treatment of bilingual children with language impairment.

During the Cold War Italy witnessed the existence of an anomalous version of a civil conflict, defined as a 'creeping' or a 'low-intensity' civil war. Political violence escalated, including bomb attacks against civilians, starting with a massacre in Milan, on 12 December 1969, and culminating with the massacre in Bologna, on 2 August 1980. Making use of the literature on national reconciliation and narrative psychology theory, this book examines the fight over the 'judicial' and the 'historical' truth in Italy today, through a contrasting analysis of judicial findings and the 'narratives of victimhood' prevalent among representatives of both the post- and the neo-fascist right.
